

AUDIENCE PACKS MEMORIAL HALL

Something entirely new and distinctly different in the way of amateur theatricals was given Honoluluans last night when "Ethereal, the Beautiful Queen," a well-known cantata, was presented in Davies memorial hall by a cast composed entirely of Chinese young men and women. If attendance makes for the success of a production, then the cantata was successful, for standing room was at a premium in the big hall.

The cast was made up of members of the choir of St. Peter's church, who spent many months drilling under the direction of Mrs. J. Pascoe of St. Mary's day school. The stage setting was beautiful, and the costumes were highly attractive. Those who took part proved to be possessed of excellent voices; in fact, the music was one of the features of the production. Miss Mary Woo, as Ethereal, did exceptionally well, and her singing left no ground for criticism. Others who handled their parts well were Harry T. Kong as Ahasuerus, Mon Fui Ching as Haman and Rev. Y. T. Kong as Mordecai. Joseph Yap furnished the accompaniment on the piano.

Following was the cast: Ethereal, the queen, Mary Woo; Ahasuerus, the king, Harry H. Kong; Haman, the king's counselor and overseer of the realm, Mon Fui Ching; Mordecai, a Jew, Rev. Y. T. Kong; Zeresh, Haman's wife, Esther Yap; Mordecai's sister, Violet Tsui; Prophetess, Fannie Ching; the queen's attendants, Phoebe Kong, Beatrice Yap; Zeresh's attendant, Ruth Yap; Scribe, E. S. Kong; Hagai, S. W. Chang; Herald, Paul Kong; Harbonah, Charles Lam; Pages, Chorus of Jews and Persians; accompanist, Joseph Yap.

OLD OAKEN BUCKET IS GIVEN HARD SWAT IN LECTURE ON BACTERIA

The little old farmhouse with its romance and its joys was swatted this morning during a lecture at the public library, the third of a series by Professor Vaughan MacCaighey, instructor of biology at the College of Hawaii. The professor declared that praise of the farm as voiced by poets and such folk because of bending apple trees, its ripened grain and its old oaken buckets is in reality a deceptive glamor hiding dangerous conditions.

"Insanity, in the majority of cases, comes from the farm," said the professor, "together with many diseases caused by wrong diet, and poor sanitary conditions."

"Bacteria in the Schools" was the subject of the lecture which was attended by an interested and audience, many of whom were school teachers.

"I am going to kill myself—it is one don't stop me," N. Akana, a waiter, said last night to the sergeant at the police station, tired of living and I am looking an easy way to die." Akana was locked up and is held in jail until an investigation can be made as to his sanity.

to make perfect flashlight pictures is by means of the IMP FLASHLIGHT GUN. No more of those glarry, glassy stares! No more of those invariably awkward poses! No more made rushes to "get in" the picture. This little gun works in broad daylight, if you wish, and it acts simultaneously with the shutter even though it may be controlled from a distance. Take flashlight pictures of moving objects! Isn't it worth investigation? See it at our store.
